“ Johanna was THE little red-haired girl, but with an extra dose of verve. I remember talking to her and her sister, who consulted with each other before they decided I was sophisticated enough to hear a song by Donovan. Then, as I am sure she was throughout the rest of her life, Johanna was savvy and ahead of her time. As a young girl, Johanna was sparkly and effervescent, with a personality as vivid as her lovely hair.
I'll bet she stayed that way her whole life. What a terrible loss.

“ I remember our Dad Leo used to refer to Johanna as his little redheaded firecracker. That she was for her entire life! She was spirited, beautiful, talented and her own very unique individual. She faced every challenge in her life her way. We didn't always agree on things but we respected one another's views. We had each other's back through our 66 years of sisterhood. She allowed me the privilege of being with her through the final months of her illness and beautiful death at St. Luke's Hospice House. Rest In Peace our little Firecracker
