“Dad took me to St. Louis one summer before school so we could go to Six Flags and ride Batman: The Ride. We ran out of gas half way there because he put a sticky note over the fuel gauge to remind him to get gas and relied on me to remind him to get gas when we stopped for breakfast.

“Two memories I have of my brother:

First Brent, Dad and I ran our office supplies stores together. We had a great time. Each Christmas we worked hard and sold many pens and other supplies to great customers. Brent enjoyed bringing in a large tin of Chex mix that we would munch on when we went into the back room. Brent loved working with customers.

Second, while we could, Brent and I enjoyed watching movies together, first in theaters, and later, when it was difficult for him to get out, at his home.
