On January 14th, I said goodbye to my dear friend Christy. I have loved her for a very long time. We were best friends when we were 17, and we did everything together. I remember Christy being vibrant with this flaming red curly hair, and a explosive personality. She was so funny oh, I was always laughing. Over the years we parted we both kind of went our separate ways, and then we met up again cuz she looked for me and found me. I got to know Christy story, and she had such a hard life, but she was the most grateful person that I've met. She doesn't have much, and life didn't leave her with much opportunity, but she took what she had and she was thankful. She loves her daughter, and she talked about how proud she was that's all she ever wanted was to be a mama and she got to be. Lucie was a good mama, she loved Ashley so much. Then I remember her calling me to tell me about her grandbabies, and she was so excited! I know but Christy was tired of fighting the fight, and was ready to go, but those of us who loved her we wanted to fix her make her better. We talked on the phone a lot, as I'm going through a lot of troubles, and Chrissy would always listen to me, and never Place judgment on me. That's what I loved about her, she let me being me, and she loved people regardless. She taught me a lot about myself, as we feel our self with so much stuff coma and then we look at somebody like her who has such a beautiful heart and this just thankful for what God has given her. What a blessing what a blessing she was in my life. Now, she is better she is with the Lord, and we will all be reconciled with her again. I can't wait to see her again. In loving memory, my dear friend, I will always love you.
