of those who I cared for most. You all have your own story, the story that was my life lived with each of you. Some good, some bad, and most of them that were not yet finished. Yet remembering me will bring a smile no matter whose mind I cross, and I can promise you that. How do I know? Because my life was fueled by laughter, by music, and by the smiles from the ones closest to me.

I lived with no fears, I lived through my regrets, and I lived the life that I was meant to live until my end.
