“ Stacy had a wonderful sense of humor. In the late 90's we visited Sanibel Island in Florida. The area is famous for its sea shells. As a result, everything in the area seems to be sea shell themed. At the condo where we were staying there was a big coffee table with a recessed area full of sand and sea shells. A large sheet of glass was then placed over the sand and shells. Stacy mentioned that while it was a cool looking "beach scene", something was missing. She then carefully lifted the glass and placed some fake dog poop in the sand and replaced the glass. It looked so perfect. We all laughed until our stomachs hurt! (and if she can read this, she's laughing now!)

I loved Stacy very much and while anybody who was close to her has suffered a great loss and is experiencing much sadness, take solace in knowing her suffering is over and that her soul is in a better place now. My deepest sympathy's to her brother Scott and all her family and friends who are now feeling the sorrow brought on by her passing. And my sincere thanks to her sister Kim who was there for her sister right up until the final moments of her life and for all she has gone through dealing with the passing of, not just a sibling, but a wonder sister full of love and kindness. May Stacy forever rest in peace.

I worked with Stacy at Metro Networks in Los Angeles. She had a great sense of humor and was fun to work with. She was full of life.
